

Araksia Kaladjian, M.A is a doctoral student in Education specializing in School Psychology at the Graduate School of Education at UC Riverside. She is a Fellow at SEARCH, the new Family Autism Resource Center at UC Riverside. Her current research focuses on teaching parents about educational practices for young children with autism that have scientific evidence of effectiveness. In addition to her research and role at SEARCH, she is completing her internship as a psychologist for a school district in Southern California.